

The J.A. Ely historical Museum & Resource Hub was founded by Emmanuel George, a millennial that as a deep passion for preserving history in his backyard. Born September 24th, 1988 in Overtown Florida, he spent his childhood years in North Miami and Miami Shores. Present day, he resides in Dania Beach. His calling to be a voice and advocate for the local black community came after being taken under Valencia Gunder's wing as one of her mentees. Through getting involved in community activism in Miami, he applied what he was taught in Dade and brought it to the Hollywood and Dania Beach communities. His passion has always been film and art. He wanted to blend what he loves with community development. Because of his work and dedication to Black Broward, he's started the Black Broward film project and is the Producer of the Sistrunk-A-Fair
